STATOTHR

Dear Mr. Becker:

We have now received responses from representatives of more than 60 professional and governmental agencies concerned with information processing and communications in higher education. Almost unanimously they have recognized that it would be desirable for such organizations to get together in a conference, and they stated their willingness to participate.

The Board of Trustees of the Interuniversity Communications Council has therefore decided to sponsor a conference at which each agency will have an opportunity briefly to describe its program and to learn what others are doing in this field. There will also be discussion of what overall planning and coordination may be desirable in the entire field of the educational applications of the new communications technologies.

I am writing this letter to tell you that we are definitely planning to hold this conference from 6:00 p.m. on Wednesday, April 13, 1966 through 3:00 p.m. Friday, April 15, 1966. Duke University, a member university of the Interuniversity Communications Council, has offered to act as the host, and we shall hold the meetings on the Duke campus at Durham, North Carolina.

We hope that you can hold these dates open so that you can attend.

The program committee is now at work making detailed plans and you will shortly be receiving the tentative program.

We are grateful to you for the interest you have expressed.

Cordially yours,

James G. Miller

Dear Dr. Miller:

Your letter to the Director concerning INTERCOM, dated September 11, was referred to me for reply.

Modern information processing technology is a topic which is of considerable importance to CIA. The conference you are planning would, therefore, be of interest to us.

The agency's representative would be Mr. Joseph Becker, whom I understand is a professional acquaintance of yours. In future correspondence, I suggest that you contact Joe directly at his home address. It is as follows:
